Award recognizes Courtot as a champion of cybersecurity education

FOSTER CITY, Calif., March 5, 2020 /PRNewswire/ -- Qualys, Inc. (NASDAQ: QLYS), a pioneer and leading provider of cloud-based security and compliance solutions, today announced that Philippe Courtot, chairman and CEO of Qualys was honored with the Benefactor Award by the International Systems and Security Association (ISSA) Education Foundation for his unwavering support of cybersecurity and cybersecurity education.

"In 1999, Philippe was among the first to recognize the value cloud-based security platforms could provide organizations. He has been a champion of the security industry ever since," said Debbie Peinert, vice president of the ISSA Education Foundation. "Over the years, he has donated, both personally and through his company, to the Howard Schmidt Memorial Scholarship, and those donations were instrumental in increasing the longevity of the fund."

"I am sincerely honored to be recognized for promoting education and research in cybersecurity by the ISSA Education Foundation," said Courtot. "Today, the industry is at a tipping point where cloud-based computing and digital transformation are bringing profound changes to the cybersecurity industry. It is, therefore, imperative that we educate the next generation of cyber talent so that we can continue to make advances in our efforts to effectively defend against cyber threats."
